

OCLC Web Services in Action

Karen A. Coombs

Product Manager, Developer Network

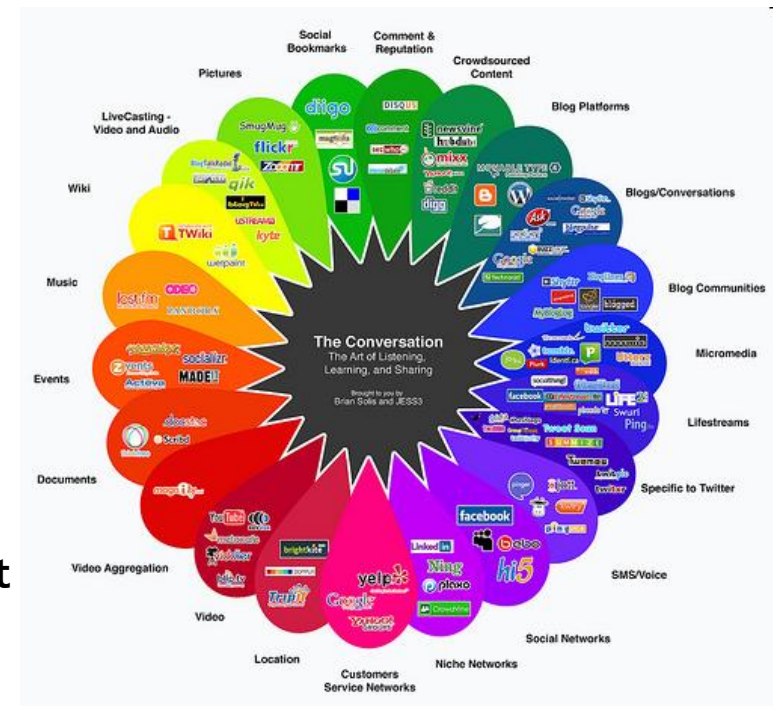

OCLC™

The world's libraries.
Connected.

What is a Web Service?

- Exposes data at the machine-to-machine level
- Lets you mix and match from all sorts of sources and build your own apps (mashups)
- Engages the library software development community
- Wikipedia: mashup is a web application that combines data from more than one source into a single integrated tool

Why should we be interested?

Expose library collections in new ways

- via mashups and web apps

Strong Social Aspect - Community Building

- Allows Developers to create innovative applications
- User networks: students, researchers and the larger world
 - Contributors
 - Consumers

Part of connecting the community to the library

- Search WorldCat with OpenSearch and get RSS or Atom responses
- Find books, video, music and more in the WorldCat database
- Get Titles, Authors, ISBNs and OCLC numbers
- Get records in standard bibliographic citation formats (APA, Chicago, Harvard, MLA, and Turabian)
- Get links back to WorldCat.org for more information including geographically-sorted Library information

The screenshot shows a web browser window titled "Cal State Fullerton: Results: php mysql - Mozilla Firefox". The address bar shows the URL "http://xerxes.calstate.edu/fullerton/books/results/local/php+mysql". The website header includes the Pollak Library logo and the text "LIBRARY RESEARCH". Below the header, there is a search bar with the text "Search keyword for php mysql" and a "GO" button. A navigation bar below the search bar has three tabs: "Cal State Fullerton", "Other Cal State campuses", and "Libraries worldwide". The search results are displayed below the navigation bar, showing "Results 1-10 of 18" and a sort by menu with options: "relevance", "date", "title", and "author". The first result is for the book "PHP/MySQL Programming for the Absolute Beginner" by Harris, Andrew, published in Boston, MA: Premier Press, 2003. Below the book title and author information, there is a table with three columns: "Location", "Call Number", and "Status". The table contains one row of data: "4th FL SOUTH", "QA76.73.P224 H37 2003", and "CHECK SHELVES". Below the table, there is a link to "Save this record". The second result is for the book "Learning PHP and MySQL (1st Edition)" by Davis, Michele E, published in Beijing ; Sebastopol, Calif.: O'Reilly, 2006. Below the book title and author information, there is a table with three columns: "Location", "Call Number", and "Status".

Building a Catalog Search Box

One task that many small libraries can find daunting is embedding a keyword search box for their library catalog into their library website. This script helps make that easier by using the WorldCat Registry to look up a library's ILS Vendor and catalog url. Then based on this building a keyword search form that can be easily cut and paste into a website.

Input your institutions OCLC Symbol to have a search box auto-generated. If your catalog isn't currently supported a message stating this will be displayed. If you'd like to help add search boxes for additional catalogs like Koha, please send a message to the OCLC DevNet Listserv.

Cut and paste the following code to create a keyword catalog search for your catalog.

<form action="http://seneca.sunyconnect.suny.edu:4390/F" method="get">
<input type="hidden" name="func" value="find-b"/>
<input type="hidden" name="find_code" value="WRD"/>
<label for="keyword"> Enter a Keyword to Search For</label>
<input type="text" value="" id="keyword" name="request"/>
<input type="submit" value="Search"/>
</form>
```
