A Brief History from the OCLC Users Council to Members Council

On May 19, 2009, the OCLC Members Council concludes its 90th and final meeting. This is the end of an era that began in 1977, when the Ohio College Library Center changed its name to OCLC and adopted a new governance structure that extended membership in the cooperative to libraries outside Ohio. In the ensuing 30+ years, libraries around the world elected 557 delegates to attend three Council meetings each year at OCLC.

As Users Council, and later, as the Members Council, delegates were charged with three main responsibilities:

1. Electing six members of the OCLC Board of Trustees on a regular basis;
2. Ratifying proposed changes to the Articles of Incorporation and Code of Regulations of OCLC; and
3. Providing the Board and OCLC management with advice, representing member interests and concerns.

Victoria Hanawalt served as President of the Users Council in 1996–1997. She later chronicled the first 20 years of Council’s history in an article, “Users Council: an Institutionalized Role for Libraries in OCLC’s Governance.”<sup>1</sup> In looking back on the first 20 years she concluded that the Council has indeed provided a national forum for articulating member library interests to OCLC, as well as a training ground for preparing individuals with library expertise to assume the responsibilities of governing the organization. She also looked to the future, noting that the Council’s representation and mode of operation would need periodic refinements in the decades to come. She asked how the growth of international membership would be accommodated in the composition of the Council and predicted virtual meetings someday. The first virtual Members Council was held in February of 2009.

Over the next decade, the Council addressed issues and concerns that Ms. Hanawalt raised, as the rate of change affecting libraries and OCLC continued to accelerate. The demographics of the cooperative expanded dramatically. From 1998 to 2008, the number of institutions participating in OCLC increased from 30,000 to 69,840. The number of participating institutions outside the United States rose from 3,200 to 14,627. OCLC governing member libraries (those institutions that contributed to WorldCat or resource sharing and participated in election of Council delegates) went from 1,729 to 11,871. The cumulative number of Council delegates elected from outside the U.S. now totals 32.

This article emphasizes the activities of the OCLC Members Council in its third and final decade, as libraries and OCLC moved toward becoming a truly global cooperative.

The 1998/1999 Users Council focused on the theme, “Digital Library Futures: Libraries, OCLC and New Models of Cooperation.” In three meetings, delegates examined likely scenarios for further development of the digital library over the next five years. Council’s message to OCLC was to continue as a leader in working with libraries and others to advance the digital library in such areas as metadata standards. The January 1999 meeting was the first and only meeting in Council’s history to be canceled because of severe winter weather in Dublin, Ohio.

Delegates also turned their attention to the rights and responsibilities of OCLC members as new technological options, such as the World Wide Web, continued to surface in the library community. They reaffirmed the Principles of Cooperation that had been adopted in 1994, which were intended to ensure the continuing viability of the WorldCat database and related services to the library and information community. They urged OCLC to provide increased support and options for libraries to help them contribute records and holdings to WorldCat.

1999 Governance Study

By the late 1990s, the need for change in the structure and composition of Users Council had become obvious to many of the varied stakeholders in the OCLC cooperative. Two key problems with the existing structure were apparent. First, the Council had almost no international representation at a time when OCLC was expanding its service centers for Europe, Asia and Canada, and establishing a new base in Latin America. Second, OCLC's newest services were not counted in the algorithm for allocating Council delegates to regional service providers. Since the governance structure was adopted in 1977, the only activities that counted were contributing or enhancing cataloging records (original or copy cataloging and online or batchload) or adding holdings to WorldCat, and resource sharing through the Interlibrary Loan subsystem.

In November 1999, the Board of Trustees commissioned a study "to determine how OCLC can best organize its governance to achieve its global vision."<sup>1</sup> The Board also created a Strategic Directions and Advisory Council to steer the consulting firm of Arthur D. Little that was doing the study and present recommendations for any changes to the Board. It is noteworthy that Arthur D. Little did OCLC's first governance study in 1977, which originally resulted in the creation of Users Council.

The 1999/2000 Users Council worked closely with the Advisory Council and the consultants. Delegates spent some five hours in sessions with the consultants. They provided thoughtful feedback and insights to a series of questions on OCLC's strategic directions and governance. What role options exist for OCLC in the digital age? How are libraries converging, diverging or changing? What principal overall corporate strategic options should OCLC pursue? What changes, if any, should be made to OCLC's governance structure to enable it to become a global library cooperative? Users Council held an unprecedented meeting at the ALA Annual Conference in Chicago in July 2000 to continue discussions regarding governance changes. In addition, members of the Advisory Council and OCLC staff participated in more than a dozen network and service center meetings to discuss the progress of the study and gather ideas from members.

In addition to governance discussions, the 1999/2000 Users Council looked at how OCLC and its regional networks could help libraries flourish in a global knowledge society. The Council's year-long theme was "The New World: OCLC, Libraries and Users in the 21st Century." Two well-known leaders in the worldwide library community, Christine Deschamps, President of IFLA, and Gary Strong, Director of the Queens Borough Public Library in New York, described the benefits and difficulties associated with participating globally while expanding library services locally. Delegates also discussed environmental trends affecting libraries and their users.

The 1999/2000 Users Council closed out its year on May 23, 2000, with a two-hour satellite broadcast viewed by more than 5,000 persons in libraries around the world. Delegates met in a television studio to hear presentations on libraries, their users and OCLC. A distinguished group of panelists answered questions phoned in by viewers.

Users Council Becomes Members Council

The 2000/2001 Users Council continued to work closely with the Board on proposed changes to OCLC's governance structure. There was another special meeting on governance held at the ALA Midwinter Meeting in January 2001 in Washington, DC. On May 21, 2001, by a vote of 60–0, Users Council delegates ratified amendments to OCLC's governance structure proposed by the Board of Trustees that changed the name of Users Council to Members Council and added six delegates from outside the United States to Members Council for three-year terms. (There were three delegates from outside the U.S. on the 2000/2001 Council.)

In addition, the Board established a Standing Joint Committee on Membership, composed of representatives from the Board, Members Council and U.S. regional networks and service centers, to recommend changes in the ways of valuing different types of contribution to the OCLC cooperative.

In their nongovernance discussions, delegates focused on “The Library as Virtual Place.” They explored virtual library models and concepts such as “library.org” and “the library as the portal of choice,” which were then in use to describe collaborative activities of libraries to provide enhanced access to information resources.

In 2001/2002, Members Council welcomed new delegates from China, France, Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands and South Africa. These “transitional” delegates, so named because they would help to transition OCLC from a national to a global cooperative, would have full voting rights, be eligible for election to Council office or the Board of Trustees, and serve three-year terms on Members Council. In 2003 the transition period was extended for three more years, from 2004 to 2007. Two new transitional delegates would be elected then from each of three OCLC international service centers: OCLC Asia Pacific, OCLC PICA, and OCLC Latin America and the Caribbean. Canada already had an elected delegate to Council based on its intellectual contributions of the OCLC system.

11,871 governing member libraries in 2009

Increased Opportunities for Participation

Delegates explored expanding the definition of OCLC membership in a global environment. They began to broadcast part of their meetings via the Web. In addition, Council passed the “Statement on Principles of Membership of the OCLC Collaborative,” which served as a guide for the Ad Hoc Committee on Membership and the Board as they revised the definition of membership in the Code of Regulations.

In May 2002, the Council ratified amendments to the OCLC Code of Regulations proposed by the Board that provided more opportunities for participation in the OCLC cooperative by more libraries and knowledge institutions around the world. This created three levels of participation in OCLC: governing members, members and participants. Depending on the extent of a library's engagement in contributing bibliographic records and interlibrary loan transactions to the cooperative (namely the level of holdings contributed to OCLC WorldCat and participation in the Interlibrary Loan Subsystem), the respective rights and responsibilities were different. Governing members elected delegates to Members Council, whereas member librarians could be elected to Council, but they could not participate in the vote to elect them.

Tracking Significant Issues

“Who’s running OCLC?” was the staff’s cry. By the end of the second half-dozen years, OCLC had enlarged its governance structure so that each participating institution had a voice—in governance.”

—Fredrick G. Kilgour, OCLC Founder and President, 1967–1980

The focus of the 2002/2003 Council was two-fold: “Libraries, Their Present and Future Global Environment: National, Regional, Local,” and “OCLC Strategic Plans and Measurements for Success.” Both were required for delegates to better understand and contribute to the future development of OCLC. In tracking the progress of globalization, delegates intensified their focus on global issues in librarianship as well as at national, regional and local levels.<sup>2</sup> Delegates’ discussions contributed to the 2004 publication of Pattern Recognition: The 2003 OCLC Environmental Scan.<sup>3</sup> A task force on staff development looked into the role of OCLC in assisting libraries in preparing their staff members for the changes in the library environment. The task force made several recommendations adopted by OCLC, including:

- Creation of a Web site that brings together the learning opportunities offered by OCLC and its regional networks<sup>4</sup>
- Evaluation of the effective use of digital collections and user behavior in the realm of digitized information<sup>5</sup>
- Creation of a Web site that listed standards activities in which OCLC is engaged, to help promote such standards in the library community.<sup>6</sup>

Also in 2002/2003, Council adopted a process for improving the continuity of discussions with OCLC staff: “Significant Issues Reports,” whereby each discussion group records any important issues that come up in its meetings that should receive further attention from OCLC management and/or the Council’s own Executive Committee. The collected and deduplicated list of issues is then forwarded to the appropriate units within OCLC for a response from management. These responses are then returned to the groups before the next Council meeting for further discussion or to make specific recommendations for action. Thus, Members Council and OCLC management are engaged in an ongoing circle of communication that keeps both groups better informed. (In 2007/2008, delegates sent 39 significant issues to OCLC management for responses, compared to 47 in 2006/2007 and 57 the year before that.)

In 2003/2004, delegates returned to the “WorldCat Principles of Cooperation” and added new language that addressed recent technological developments. A Committee on Communications for the Cooperative reviewed the various ways OCLC and the regional networks communicate with members. The committee reported on survey findings that indicated the top two ways members to find out about what OCLC is doing are e-mails from the networks (favored by 61% of respondents) and the OCLC Newsletter (favored by 58%).<sup>7</sup> These results led to changes in the newsletter, making it more feature-oriented and colorful. It also led to revitalization of the weekly e-mail publication called OCLC Abstracts that focuses on new products and services from OCLC and regional networks, lists new members and highlights news from the information environment that affects libraries.<sup>8</sup>

In 2004/2005, Council’s theme was “Pattern Recognition: Moving Libraries Beyond Their Comfort Zones.” Delegates provided OCLC with valuable advice and guidance as OCLC began the Open WorldCat Pilot, which studied the feasibility of making WorldCat records and library holdings available to the general public on the open Web via search engines such as Google and Yahoo! A task force was created to study how libraries and OCLC might shape future directions of electronic content.

In 2005/2006, delegates explored how to help make the OCLC cooperative more inclusive of libraries and cultural heritage centers worldwide and still develop revenue to sustain and further ongoing activities. Delegates also examined rural and small libraries to ensure that the cooperative “leaves no library behind.”<sup>9</sup> Members

From OCLC Users Council to Members Council

Council also finalized a report on electronic content that included recommendations for expanding access to electronic resources through OCLC products. Delegates held discussions on the role of networks and service centers in a rapidly changing global environment. This relationship would continue to be redefined and negotiated as services and products evolve along with the collaborative. It was noted that Members Council's role in these discussions was to ensure all services are responsive to member libraries and that the underlying structure fulfills the needs of libraries.<sup>10</sup>

Meeting in Québec City

In 2006/2007, Ernie Ingles, Vice-Provost and Chief Librarian, University of Alberta, served as the first President of Members Council from outside the United States. In February 2007, the Council also met outside the United States for the first time—in Québec City, Québec, Canada. Council monitored the progress of the RLG-OCLC integration and discussed relationships between libraries and other memory institutions. The Task Force on Integration of E-books presented a report on how libraries and OCLC can integrate e-books into library services and collections. Delegates also helped evaluate OCLC products and services for the global marketplace. There were 13 delegates from outside the U.S. on the 2006/2007 Council.<sup>11</sup>

“Coming to Columbus three times a year is not what I consider a paid vacation!”

—Marshall Keys, Users Council Delegate, 1991–2001 and Executive Director of NELINET; statement at October 1994 Users Council Meeting

2007: Another Governance Study

In April 2007, the Board of Trustees began another review of OCLC's governance structure. In announcing the study, OCLC Board Chair Lizabeth Wilson stated, “As OCLC becomes an increasingly global cooperative, it has also become clear that we need to adjust our governance to ensure representation and participation by our members around the world.”

The 2007/2008 Members Council reviewed the work done by the Governance Study Committee of the Board of Trustees and provided input into their deliberations. At the recommendation of the Members Council Executive Committee, OCLC management established a Small Libraries Advisory Committee to work to improve access to information resources for small and rural libraries. This committee recently recommended that OCLC develop a low-cost, library-in-a-box for small libraries. Delegates originally suggested and rated highly this innovative idea. Delegates also unanimously adopted a resolution presented by the Task Force on E-Book Integration that urged OCLC to provide eContent to libraries worldwide.

On May 20, 2008, the Members Council ratified changes to OCLC's governance structure proposed by the Board of Trustees. These changes are discussed elsewhere in this volume and include the creation of regional councils that will send delegates to a Global Council. At this writing, Members Council delegates were working hard on the transformation to the new structure.

2008/2009: The Final Year of Members Council

“Embracing the Differences: Greater Understanding, Modeling, and Celebrating the Global Cooperative” was the theme of the 2008/2009 Members Council. Under the leadership of President Loretta Parham, Library Director and CEO, The Atlanta University Center, delegates convened for the last three meetings of the OCLC Members Council.

Throughout the year, the Members Council Executive Committee worked with the Transition Committee of the Board on implementing the new governance structure of regional councils and a global council.

In November, OCLC revised its nearly 20-year-old record use policy, and announcement of the changes generated controversy in the library community. Members Council and the OCLC Board of Trustees jointly convened a Review Board of Shared Data Creation and Stewardship to get feedback from the membership and inform OCLC on the principles and best practices for sharing library data. A final report was scheduled to be submitted to the OCLC Board in May 2009. In the meantime, OCLC delayed implementation of the policy until the third quarter of the 2009 calendar year.

Council discussed and passed two resolutions proposed by the Members Council Executive Committee. The first provided for the establishment of implementation committees that will organize three Regional Councils. These regional committees are chaired respectively by Chew Leng Beh, from the Asia Pacific region; Berndt Dugall, Direktor and Librarian, Universität Frankfurt, from the Europe, the Middle East and Africa region; and Patrick Wilkinson, Director, University of Wisconsin–Oshkosh, from The Americas region.

A second resolution defined the process for transitioning to a Global Council Executive Committee, a group that includes the three regional committee chairs. Jan Ison, Executive Director, Lincoln Trail Libraries System (ILLINET), current Members Council Vice President/President-Elect, will serve as the first president of the new OCLC Global Council in 2009/2010.

The Council conducted a virtual meeting February 9–11, 2009, to discuss opportunities and challenges confronting the global information community, to learn more about collaborative services, and to continue the transition to a Global Council and Regional Councils. The virtual meeting was also an experiment in which delegates learned about virtual meeting technology and its applicability to the forthcoming Global Council and Regional Council meetings. Delegates evaluating the virtual meeting gave it high marks.

Delegates voted to ratify the Global Council Bylaws as approved by the OCLC Board of Trustees, and also approved new Membership and Governance Protocols and referred them to the Board with the recommendation that the Board approve them.

The new Regional Councils and Global Council will serve as key discussion forums and major communications links among Members, the Board and OCLC. The Regional Councils will send delegates to the Global Council, whose responsibilities are similar to those of the Members Council: electing six members of the Board of Trustees; ratifying changes to the Articles of Incorporation; and providing OCLC with advice and counsel.

Impact of Members Council

Throughout its history, Council frequently addressed the importance of membership and contribution to the cooperative. The “Statement on Principles of Membership of the OCLC Collaborative,” adopted by Council in February 2002, includes such member commitments as:

- “Share collections, metadata, best practices and expertise without expectations of parity
- Promote internationally accepted standards to facilitate resource sharing and information exchange

From OCLC Users Council to Members Council

- Participate in and work to enhance the governance structure of OCLC through Members Council and the Board of Trustees, and
- Promote responsible use of OCLC-derived records by approved users.”<sup>12</sup>

Council has also made recommendations that resulted in new OCLC services. For example, it urged OCLC to implement the ILL Fee Management (IFM) service, which simplifies transfer of small payments among libraries to reimburse each other for resource sharing. A long debate among the membership and within the OCLC staff had ensued about the advisability of OCLC facilitating libraries in charging one another for ILL. Council passed a resolution encouraging the organization to move forward with this service that saves libraries hundreds of thousands of dollars each year in staff costs. Delegates later made a similar recommendation for institutions exchanging digital documents among themselves. More recently in a discussion of the future of WorldCat, delegates were excited about and strongly suggested the concept of it becoming a local catalog. About three years later, WorldCat Local was introduced. The two-year study of e-content and e-book integration by Council task forces resulted in strong, action-oriented recommendations to OCLC and good interaction with OCLC management.

Under the new governance structure, the Regional Councils and OCLC Global Council will keep the communication flow open and have the potential to move the OCLC global community further toward a collaborative focused on collectively meeting user needs and beyond—even beyond a cooperative to a more productive, socially networked and engaged member environment of the fast-moving, but challenging 21st century world of information!

The Members Council frequently has been referred to as the voice of the OCLC membership. Over the past 30 years, the deliberations of 557 delegates have contributed to OCLC’s strategic directions and provided valuable feedback on operations and policies. Delegates have taken time from their demanding schedules to participate in Members Council, and their contributions have benefitted institutions across the OCLC global cooperative. The more than 70,000 libraries in 112 countries that have contributed to OCLC owe them a deep debt of gratitude!
