Code of Conduct

OCLC is committed to providing a friendly, professional, safe, and welcoming experience for all attendees of this event.

Participants are expected to maintain professional and civil discourse throughout the webinar.

- Participants may hear some views with which they do not agree. We encourage participants to consider views that differ from their own with an open mind and respond to differences in a respectful way.
- We will not tolerate harassment, intimidation, or discrimination in any form.

Failure to abide by these expectations will result in removal from the webinar.

- Attendees should contact the OCLC meeting host directly if there are any concerns about unacceptable behavior.

We value you and your participation, and we appreciate your help in making this event a success.

About Us

The Trans Metadata Collective is a group of dozens of cataloguers, librarians, archivists, scholars, and information professionals with a concerted interest in improving the description and classification of trans and gender diverse people in Galleries, Libraries, Archives, Museums, and Special Collections (GLAMS) and other information systems.

The Collective's primary goal was to develop a set of best practices for the description and classification of trans and gender diverse information resources. This report has now been released.

Landing Page: Queer Collective

Introduction

The Queer Metadata Collective is a group of cataloguers, librarians, archivists, scholars, museum and information professionals with a concerted interest in improving the description and classification of queer people in Galleries, Libraries, Archives, Museums, and Special Collections (GLAMS) and other information systems. The Collective's primary goal is to develop a set of best practices for the description, cataloging, and classification of queer information resources in GLAMS.

to learn more & get involved

Current Status

The Queer Metadata Collective's work is underway. The initial call for participation attracted over 200 working group members and over 600 newsletter/peer review participants.

Currently, the QMDC has divided into 5 working groups:

1. Ethical Framework/Document Structure WG — Developing sections for future report (bibliography, history, context, best practices etc.)
2. Classification WG — Developing policies, procedures, and best practices for the use and updating of classification procedures.
3. Description WG — Developing policies, procedures, and best practices for archival / museum / gallery description, labelling, etc.
4. Subject Headings WG — Developing policies, procedures, and best practices for the development, use, and updating of subject headings.
5. Names, Naming, and Authorities WG — Developing policies and procedures for name/record authorities, naming policies.

Our future plans call involve the creation of Toolkit and Education groups which will operationalize the QMDC's recommendation.

QMDC's Recommendations

1. The best-placed person to consult is the creator or community themselves.
2. Make the process of metadata creation transparent and have harmful / historical language statement policies and procedures.
3. Encourage, support, or develop advocacy in your institutions and contexts for better and more sensitive metadata.
4. Be explicit about queerphobia in collections, items, and metadata.

QMDC's Recommendations

1. The best-placed person to consult is the creator or community themselves.
2. Make the process of metadata creation transparent and have harmful / historical language statement policies and procedures.
3. Encourage, support, or develop advocacy in your institutions and contexts for better and more sensitive metadata.
4. Be explicit about queerphobia in collections, items, and metadata.
5. Use culturally and contextually appropriate labels for queer subjects, communities, and resources
6. Give preference to alternative systems and practices that prioritise local control and authority when possible.
7. Identify queer content and metadata through regular assessment and prioritise for ongoing remediation.
8. If you are queer, trust in your own authority, knowledge, community warrant, and your “queer cataloguer’s judgement.”

best practice #1

The best-placed person to consult is the creator or community themselves.

- Prioritise community terms including reclaimed or self-ascribed slurs and retain community terms alongside authoritative ones.

best practice #1

The best-placed person to consult is the creator or community themselves.

- Prioritise community terms including reclaimed or self-ascribed slurs and retain community terms alongside authoritative ones.
- Practise respectful and reciprocal collaboration with communities when possible to avoid uncritical application of terms. Follow community protocols as part of this process.
- Prioritise using the terms the creators of the work use in subject descriptor fields, even if those terms aren't in controlled vocabularies

best practice #1 (cont'd)

When creating metadata about deceased people, follow the Collective's Chain of Trust:

In the event that the creator is deceased or no appropriate cultural contact is found, consider consultation with the following sources or groups (if possible) in this order of preference:

best practice #1 (cont'd)

When creating metadata about deceased people, follow the Collective's Chain of Trust:

In the event that the creator is deceased or no appropriate cultural contact is found, consider consultation with the following sources or groups (if possible) in this order of preference:

- public statements by the individual,
- correspondence,
- partner(s) at time of death,
- chosen family members,
- community members,
- children (adopted or biological),
- and, if all other options are exhausted, family of origin.

best practices #2 & #3

2. Make the process of metadata creation transparent and have harmful/historical language statement policies and procedures, including a form or an email address through which communities or creators can reach out.

best practices #2 & #3

2. Make the process of metadata creation transparent and have harmful/historical language statement policies and procedures, including a form or an email address through which communities or creators can reach out.

3. Encourage, support, or develop advocacy in your institutions and contexts for better and more sensitive metadata.

Statement on Potentially Harmful Language in Collections, Cataloging and Description

Brandeis University was founded on the principles of social justice and equality and the Brandeis Library has been a cornerstone for that vision. The Brandeis Library makes an impact across our community by fostering research, teaching, and discovery, and by providing professional services, resources, experience, and expertise.

Please read this sensitivity message

It is a condition of use that users ensure that any disclosure of the information contained in this catalogue is consistent with the views and sensitivities of relevant Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. This includes:

Language

Users are warned that there may be words and descriptions which may be culturally sensitive and which might not normally be used in certain public or community contexts. Terms and annotations which reflect the creator's attitude or that of the period in which the item was written may be considered inappropriate today in some circumstances.

Please note:

This website contains names, images and voices of deceased Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

This website contains war-related material, including images which some people may find confronting and disturbing.

View our disclaimer for more information

best practice #4

Be explicit about queerphobia in collections, items & metadata.

- Include a contextualising statement and/or content warning for sensitive language that is self-ascribed or directly in the material itself, either before the user encounters it, or in each place encountered

best practice #4

Be explicit about queerphobia in collections, items & metadata.

- Include a contextualising statement and/or content warning for sensitive language that is self-ascribed or directly in the material itself, either before the user encounters it, or in each place encountered
- Identify WEB3CH2A2MS subjects in catalogues and descriptions where possible. Add local subdivisions for “--Heterosexual” “--Man” “--Able-Bodied” “--Allosexual.”
- When describing harassment, harm, violence: perpetrators and victims should be identified with the active voice and responsibility embedded within metadata.

best practice #5

Use culturally and contextually appropriate labels for queer communities, subjects, and resources

- Collaborate with the specifically-impacted community and be aware that individuals within that community may have different terminology.

best practice #5

Use culturally and contextually appropriate labels for queer communities, subjects, and resources

- Collaborate with the specifically-impacted community and be aware that individuals within that community may have different terminology.
- Different cultures and languages understand and classify genders and sexuality which may not translate into the dominant culture or languages
- Include terms in the original language (original script and transliterated) alongside added translations and descriptions.

best practice #6

Give preference to alternative systems and practices that prioritise local control and authority when possible.

- Interrogate conflicting needs in knowledge creation and discovery.

best practice #6

Give preference to alternative systems and practices that prioritise local control and authority when possible.

- Interrogate conflicting needs in knowledge creation and discovery.
- Make a variant heading the authorised heading; Use non-LCSH controlled vocabularies and ontologies; Create local Cutter numbers, subject guides, or collection tags for orientations, identities, or topics not represented—all of these are better than collocating by classification.

best practice #7

Identify queer content and metadata through regular assessment and prioritise for ongoing remediation.

- Plan proactively for periodic assessment and remediation.

best practice #7

Identify queer content and metadata through regular assessment and prioritise for ongoing remediation.

- Plan proactively for periodic assessment and remediation.
- Avoid using machine learning, “AI”, or automation for batch replacement of terms. Only use them as a tool to aid assessment, alongside qualitative analysis around the rationale and impact of existing description.

best practice #8

If you are queer, trust in your own authority, knowledge, community warrant, and your “queer cataloguer’s judgement.”

- If relevant to the resource, feel comfortable assigning headings for historical identity labels that are no longer commonly used such as “Invert.”
- If you are not queer: avoid applying queer terminology or classification to a resource if the resource has nothing to do with queerness. Don’t apply queer terminology to authority files if they are not relevant.

- Most LCSH Search is more precise for more specific terms
- Most EDS terms are more precise for more general terms
- With exceptions, EDS is more precise for all terms whether more or less specific

A dark, atmospheric illustration of a Mothman, a legendary cryptid with large, bat-like wings and glowing red eyes, serves as the background for the slide.

Does this mean we throw out legacy metadata in favor of linked data? No!

- Legacy metadata can always be linked into an ontology later
- It can serve as “breadcrumbs” in a methodology like the one described to test whether an algorithm is retrieving what you want it to, or results that are topical and unbiased
- If it provides source information like the 670 field of a NACO record, it could be used as a check on hallucinating AI
- Maybe precision is increased not by the linked data relationships themselves but the attributes accessible through those relationships

Metadata continues to underwrite search that is precise, transparent, and authoritative.
