

Yoshinori Sato

Yoshinori Sato is Professor of library and information science, Tohoku Gakuin University, Japan. After having been experienced in both library practice, he received Ph. D from the University of Library and Information Science in 2003. He also serves as Guest Professor in National Institute for Informatics. His current interests include scholarly communication and publishing, and preservation of and access to cultural/historical heritage.