Workflow improvements

Include non-Roman characters in requests

Non-Roman characters are now included in the ILL request when the bibliographic record for the requested item includes non-Roman characters in the title, author, or publisher field. This can help the lending library better understand what item is being requested.

For example, this bibliographic record includes both non-Roman characters and transliterated data.

Previously, only the transliterated data was included in the ILL request.

Now, both the transliterated data and the non-Roman characters are included in the request.

Confirm proper formatting of addresses

You can now have increased confidence that delivery, billing, and return addresses are accurate. An alert message will now display for loan requests when an address does not contain minimum information: first line of address and city. This alert applies to Delivery Address and Billing Address (in the borrower's view) and Return Address (in the lender's view).

For example, the City field here is blank.

So, an alert is displayed.

Warnings also display in Service Configuration if you create or edit a Constant Data record without the minimum address information. For example:
WorldCat® Discovery Services (patron requesting)

Release notes

WorldCat Discovery is on a different installation schedule than WorldShare ILL, so additional enhancements to patron requesting will become available with WorldCat Discovery releases. These are described in the WorldCat Discovery release notes.

Bug fixes

Accordions now stay open (or closed) when viewing requests

You can now more easily navigate among requests because the system remembers which accordions are open or closed as you move to the next or previous request. This “memory” is for the current session only, so you’ll need to reopen or reclose accordions according to your preferences at the start of each session.
